It is often scary when you start at a new school . . . the buildings, the corridors and even the people are different from what you knew before. In First Friend, Kerry gets lost coming back from the library. To help those who are new to your school, draw a map of the school (or just a part of it if it is too big!) in the space below and use arrows to give directions so people can find their way from important buildings back to your classroom!

(Ideas for important buildings: office, library, canteen, toilets.)
